FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE.

Winning Technologies launches new charities division, Winning Technologies Charities, to help children gain knowledge through technology.

Winning Technologies Inc. (St. Louis, MO) is proud to announce their new charities division, "Winning Technologies Charities". The charities division of Winning Technologies Inc. is designed to bring technology to underprivileged kids throughout the United States. Although their primary focus is on St. Louis and the immediate metropolitan area, Winning Technologies Charities will be working to bring technology to other cities where their offices are located: Phoenix, San Francisco, Wichita, and Tampa.

Taking old computer equipment (computers, keyboards, etc.) and refurbishing them, the new charity then works with schools, businesses, and other charities to get the computers to places they are needed most. "Computers are an everyday part of life this day and age. For a young person to grow up without learning about computers, or technology for that matter, puts them at a disadvantage. I think everyone deserves a fair chance at learning," states Mark Bland, PR Director for Winning Technologies.

"We are broadening our horizons, and helping people at the same time," said Scott Lewis, CEO and President of Winning Technologies, of his new division. Moreover, the broadening has only begun. Winning Technologies Charities recently received a shipment of used computers to refurbish. "We are currently in the process of fixing up these old computers and getting them ready for the kids."

Seventy percent of all donations received from outside sources go back into funding Winning Technologies Charities programs such as: Computers for Kids, education programs and mentoring programs. Along with their ability to provide technology to the underprivileged, Winning Technologies Charities also provides technology services to other non-profit charitable organizations at reduced rates. If anyone is interested in getting more information on Winning Technologies Charities, call Scott Lewis at 314-379-8279.
