Fenton Technologies Merges With Winning Technologies

Winning Technologies Now Offers Enhanced IT Security Services

ST. LOUIS, MO – January 7, 2005 – Winning Technologies, a nationwide information technology consulting firm with headquarters in O’Fallon (St. Louis) MO., announced they have merged with Fenton Technologies, an IT security services firm, located in Chesterfield, MO.

Fenton Technologies and its President, CJ Rowell, will become part of the Winning Technologies team. Rowell will serve as Director of Enterprise Risk Services. The merger enables Winning Technologies to offer enhanced IT security services to include assessment, auditing, deployment, policy and training.

“The merger enables us to offer complete and comprehensive information security solutions,” said Scott Lewis, president of Winning Technologies. “CJ has an outstanding background in all matters relating to security issues. He has consulted with many large corporations and organizations, and will be a real asset as we expand our service offerings to our clients.”

In addition to its O’Fallon headquarters, Winning Technologies maintains several offices throughout the United States including Atlanta, Buffalo, Detroit, Las Vegas, Phoenix, Tampa, Wichita and several cities in California. The firm employs professionals who are experts in Information Technology. Serving the construction, healthcare, hospitality and other industries, they are skilled at identifying opportunities to maximize internal capabilities while enhancing a company’s bottom line. They help guide companies to the cutting edge technology solutions that best meet their business objectives. Their solutions help organizations maximize return on investment, streamline work processes and improve profitability.
